The city election, as everybody presaw, has resulted in the triumph of he independent Democratic ticket, the mbination of radicals and Third-party sts, the latter alone embracing probably alf the Democratic strength of the city. With the Democratic party split in two, and one half, aided by both the opposition factions, voting against the other half, the result indeed could not be doubtful. The donble-handed or triple-handed half was bound to beat the single-handed one. And so it did. Tomppert is Mayor. The radicals and Third-party men have helped the Democrats to elect one good Demo-

But posterity will feel no anger at Mr. Davis. It will not think of his enemies as they fondly think of themselves. But, on the other hand, the entire case will be contemplated with the quiet. serene composure with which a mathematician studies his problem; and then the relation of the treatment he has received to the immutable principles of sound morality must come forth, and guide the Dutch to take Holland. That is all. The final decision. I have sometimes asked myself, with no little anxiety, if the parties to his long imprisonment had ever calmly reflected on the character of the facts which they are giving to history; and if they have any care at all for the solemn verdict to be pronounced over them and him when both parties lie still in the grave. That the war would produce a vast deal of bad passion, and in fact greatly demoralize our people, was to be expected. Here, then, we have the fact fairly brought to light, that the South acted on a supposed right which she had, as States of the Union. In this view of the case, the peculiar virus of treason, knowingly and willingly committed against the government, does not, and cannot, inhere as a quality in the act of taking up arms; and to overlook this fact, and to punish without regard to it, is to strike at the roots of moral good and evil, and make prisoners to become the victims of mere passion. I speak to the common heart of humanity, and fear not the answer that may be returned. The act of the South reminded that to holders of season tickets was reserved the important privilege of being present at the "opening ceremony" (to say nothing of the subsequent distribution of prizes), and as hitherto, in all previous exhibitions, the opening has been the great object of attraction, ninety-nine people out of a hundred took their season tickets manuly with a view of securing this may be returned. The act of the South was but expressive of the political ereed was the representative of that creed; and, having failed to make it good, he is in the people out of a hundred took their season tickets mainly with a view of securing this advantage. Now, I always shrewdly suspected that a good deal of disappointment and grumbling would arise on this subject; and this proved to be the case when, last week, it began to be said that the "idea" of an "opening ceremony" had been "given up" (Q.—Ind it ever been seriously cutertained within the last six mouths?) and that notice had been sent to the royal and illustrious personages, who had signilied their intention of being present, not to put themselves out hands of the conquering party. There he lies in prison, helpless as a child, but denying the fact of treason charged upon him, and demanding a legal trial-and even this has been steadily refused for two years. At one time he is charged with being a party to the murder of President Lincoln, and at another with having connived at inhuman treatment of Federal prisoners during the war; and, after all this, there is not the least prospect of his being brought to trial. The moral effect of all this is easily perceived. It needs scarcely to be traced out here. Exile is sometimes more venerable than the tomb; and the human present, not to put themselves out of the way. Most people think that it might have been as well, and that it certainly would have looked better had this intimation been made a little earlier, and the sale of season tickets, "conferring the privilege of being present at the openug ceremony," not been continued to heart follows its own heavenly light in within a week of the ist of April, without the be no opening ceremony at all. I think the Imperial Commission can scarcely have been thus long in making up their own mind on the subject, for the construction of the building, as it rose, must have convinced them of the almost impossibility of having any such ceremony within spite of the subtile sophistry of mere po litical logic. The Government has created for Mr. Davis a sympathy which he could never have produced for himself. The Southern cause is lost in the perseented and injured man. The folly of the y of having any such ceremony within is walls; and the choice, long since made, f the Palace of Industry lor the distrib-tion of the prizes shows that the Commispast is atoned for by the weary sufferings of the present, and over the darkness of two years of imprisonment ten thousand n were already aware of the inadequacy their own erection for any such pur-se. In plain words, the season ticket lders consider themselves to have been oyal hearts throw the divine light of their pity and forgiveness. And this feeling will increase by degrees, till it will fill the breasts of millions. The Government will invest Mr. Davis with the glories of maryrdom, and create for him a deathless name. It will impart other principles and other interests to his part in the rebellion than those which intrinsically belong to it, and present to posterity the lost cause te, and that it will be very difficult to of the South in a better aspect than its and l'alace of the Champs in full play to the dreary and empty wall of the neglected most devoted friends could do. The Attorney-General (Mr. Stanberry)

This is an original case, and I believe the practice is to obtain leave of the court to file the bill. It is a bill, in my judgment, so far us one of the parties is concerned, against the United States, and I wish to extend the first partners and head of the parties is concerned, against the United States, and I wish to appear at the first moment such an application is presented and object to the court's entertaining jurisdiction if it were in limina. I have suggested to my learned friend Judge Sharkey that perhaps if he would make a motion for leave to file the bill he would, in the most regular way, allow me to make the objection I have against the court's extertaining this nydrophobia, she thought nothing nore about the matter until the norning of Monday, the twenty-fifth alt, when on going to wash her face the uit, when on going to wash her face the touch of the water "made her shudder," as she described it. The fearful truth flashed on her instantly, but being a lady of great self-command, she simply said to her sister, "I'm going to go mad; I can't live," adding that she would, however, "finish spinning the ralle," he "finish spiuning the rolls" she was en-gaged upon. She worked on during the lay, with some increase of the horrible symptoms, but nothing visible to others; States is concerned.
Mr. Sharkey—That is all the motion I make if the objection is persisted in.
The question the gentleman presents is one which will come up as a matter of course. We expect to discuss it and are prepared to discuss it now or at any time the court may assign for it.

I have already remarked that it is a bill that discuss it may be supported to the court may assign for it. symptoms, but nothing visible to others; and the next morning, on sitting down to the table, she remarked to the family, "You must take that water from the table or I can't eat anything." She at a lattle, and got up, saying she would go to work again. She continued through that day as before, but with a decided strengthening of her repugnauce to water, of which, she said, "the very sight sent a tingling feeling all through her." She also complained that the glistening face of the clock affected her in the same way. On Wednesday she was too far overcome to work, and while stauding in the floor speaking to some of her family, she beall courts have preference, and the earlier it is settled the better. 1 am aware, too, of the importance and magnitude of the or a court to determine, between the Con-titution and the legislative department of the Government. But however delicate t may be, I have the consolation of knowto work, and while standing in the Boor speaking to some of her family, she be-gan grinding her teeth, and directly after fell down in a lit, the foam working out of her mouth, her teeth gnashing, and the younger children, who were with her at the time, ran out in great alarm, and the neighbors hurrying in found her on the floor near the tire, in the same ter-rible condition, but she hit so luriously at ing that this court is able to meet it. It is a very important case, designed so that the constitutionality of a recent act of Congress may be tested; and as the miscongress may be tested; and as the mis-chief that must result from delay will be progressing in the meantime, we desire to have as early a hearing as possible. I am willing to file the bill, and I propose, if the court desire, to read it.

The Chief Justice—We understand you on the floor near the tire, in the same ter-rible condition, but she bit so furiously at every one who touched her that it was im-possible to do anything with her. The fire was removed so that she might not injure herself by it, and she was left lying till the spasm had passed off. She was then placed upon the bed, and Dr. Rooker call-ed in. When he arrived she was again onvulsed, and senseless, uttering short barking sounds, and snapping at every-thing that approached her. A bloody froth was constantly issning from her mouth, which she tried to spit at those around her. He caused her to those around her. He caused her to be tied down in the bed, and proceeded to administer morphine, to relieve her agony. In a lucid interval she remonstrated, saying: "I must die: I know it, and I want to die in my senses, so don't stupify me with medicine." After it, and I want to die in my senses, so don't stupify me with medicine." After another fit the Doctor proposed another dose of morphine, and at last she consented, but added: "You must not give it to me with water." But this remedy produced hut little effect. The awful paroxysms continued, with the same frightful suggestions of doggish sound, and the same frantic efforts to bitc. She bit her hands terrilly, and bit pieces out of the pillow and bed clothes Dr. A. G. Ruddle was also called in, but his assistance was as unavailing Mr. Sharkey-I will file the application.

Singular Discovery of Treas-

A singular discovery of treasure-trove has been made on the sea-beach midway between Scaton Barew and West Hartleonol, England. In consequence of a cery boisterons sea rolling on the const, ull the surface saud has been washed from the beach for upwards of a mile on the and gravel are now exposed, in the midst of which the discovery has been made. On a Sunday afternoon a fortnight ago some workingmen were walking along the beach, and being astonished at the un found disappointment in the suspension of the latter enterprise. I admit that the reasons which you have assigned for that suspension seem to be irresistible. It is impossible for private individuals or corporate companies to build telegraphs without capital; and it is equally impossible for private individuals or corporate companies to build telegraphs without capital; and it is equally impossible for individuals or corporations they had to desist until the water receded. Why Don't the Butter Come?

Well, this question has been repeatedly asked this winter by our churners. Cream prepared according to rule by thermometer, varied in heat, keptin a warm room for a balfday or more, previous to being put in the churn; hot cream, vinagar, salt, and all the traditions poured in; still the butter did not come—half a day, and sometimes all of a long evening before the butter came, and, when it did come, such stuff. Sheep's taltow, on a sold frosty morning, might be better. It reminded me of just such a time in may boylead. We did not solve the question then, but found heating the cream a great benefit. Then sometimes it did not come as all, and so it happened this winter. We attributed it then to carn folder, and, as we knew no before, did so again; but we couldn't see why, as it was naver better. But a reason must be had, and when it was given we could reat easy; though the churner was still could rest easy; though the churner was still rather uneasy. Well, an anciout maiden rewas attended with the usual difficulty, were-solved to know about it. Well, the time came; butter in about a half an hour—crysta-line, semi-transparent, nice and good. To-day we churned again; butter in twenty five ished—much chaff; but, unlike some of them, t has a small kernel. Une the kerdel—burn e chaff. Country Gentleman.

that wealth is in proportion to labor, and labor is almost in proportion to population. Making the necessary deduction from the labor of the period from 18th to S65, on account of the great number of aborers in the armies, it will be set off by he fact that agricultural machinery great y multiplied, and that machinery did an work as five did before. Taking all things into view, it is to be doubted whether the industry of the country was materially reduced till 1864, when the want of agricul-tural laborers began to be felt. On the whole, then, but little deduction is to be made from the general average of industry

My observation enables me to state, as a tact, that publishers of newspapers are more poorly rewarded than any other class of men in the United States, who invest an equal amount of labor, capital, and thought. They are expected to do more service for less pay, to stand more sponging and "dead-heading," to puff and defend more people without fee or hope of reward than any other class.
